THE AMAZING AND VERSATILE BARNEYS OF WASHINGTON

An Undraped Statue on Their Lawn Has Thrown Into the Lime-Light a Family Whose Talents and Unconventionalities Keep Society in the National Capital in Constant Expectation.

Mrs. Barney in Her Costume as an Egyptian Princess, One of Her Many Remarkable Gowns.

N undraped statue on the lawn brought the Barney family of Washington into international notoriety in a day. Yet for years the members of this remarkable household have kept the National capital in a state of constant expectancy.

They are more than a family, these Barneys; they are an issue.

Whenever a select and exclusive group of the smart set gathers about the dining table, and the flow of nimble

Bust of Miss Natalie Barney, Made by Her Sister. cessfully launched she still kept watch over it—and does to this day. Blending her histrionic instincts with her desire to assist the poor, Mrs. Barney at that time commenced a series of entertainments in aid of her charities at the local theatres. These consisted of plays, pantomimes, and like view, for Mrs. Barney marshaled all of wealthy Washington society at her beck and marched them to the box office! As works of art, these excursions of hers into the dramatic field were, at the time, pronounced by many dramatic. critics as worthy of high praise.

Miss Laura Barney Posing in the Home Studio as the Heroine of Her Play, "God's Heroes."

In several of these Mrs. Barney herself appeared, generally in the leading rôles, one in particular which aroused a vast deal of comment, wherein she appeared in the costume of a Greek girl or nymph, and, with nearly half a century of years behind her, danced to music of her own composition various dances of an entirely original order. These dances, she explained, were educational as well as entertaining, invented, or rather created, by her, she announced, to teach the young American girl grace and beauty of movement.

And all the while this remarkable woman, in addition to numberless other time-consuming interests in business or society, was doing a full day's work six days in the week painting! Her specialty in this line was portraits, and during that period she painted the portraits of scores of sitters, among them Bernard Shaw, Whistler, her one-time teacher, and Mrs. Patrick Campbellthese in odd hours of her little runs to wit, sent sparkling on its way with the advent of the oyster, and degenerating into a sluggish stream of inane platitudes with the arrival of the entree, is sinking, lifeless, into a pool of silence with the incoming of the ice, the watchful hostess, unfluttered by the critical situation, reaches back into that convolution of her brain marked "Emergency" and, drawing forth, deftly tosses into the centre of the table this conversational bombshell:

"What do you really think of the Barneys?"

Then she leans back, smiling com- Miss Laura Barney in Her Bahai fortably, while her guests lock horns Costume. and silence-flees.

"They are poseurs, learned only in the stale devices of studied eccentric- know of the capital to know of the ity!" exclaims a beribboned member of | Barney family. Not only do the wealthy dwellers

a legation. "Nonsense!" hotly replies a famous in the sacred precincts of Dupont Circle engineer. "it is genius scorning the and the surrounding districts, the abode narrow conventionalities of society." "Genius nothing!" interrupts a scien- concerning this interesting family, its tist with seven letters after his name, unconventionalities, its offshootings "the veriest tyro in art or literature into all that is unique and oblique, and or ethics would laugh at the Barneys' its general indifference to the world's pretensions. They fool nobody but the opinion, but the humblest boardingsimple minded."

"What but genius could ever show | favor to the grocery man, what she such remarkable versatility in every really thinks on the subject; and it is branch of art as Mrs. Barney has expositively refuses to write for the newspapers.

"And what but oddity and freakish- Natalie, and Mrs. Barney; but the genius, Whistler. ness would build a quarter-of-a-mil-Hon dollar house and not put a bed in it!" exclaims the practical wife of a ity, idealism of the loftiest, practical- of Ohio, and, when he died several many things that at once brought her Cabinet officer.

amounted to about ten million dollars, Bahai religion, or cult rather, which the Barneys, themselves of the ultra- cially in its suffering, and yet absothe half of which came to her, while languished in America with but a few fashionable set in Washington, furnish lute, cold-blooded indifference to what the balance went to her two daughters, half-hearted members, was, through a perennial subject of heated debate in this same human kind may have to Laura and Natalie, in their own right, her efforts and by her enthusiasm and that city, no matter when or where the say or think of her and her doings, Each of the famiry is thus wealthy on purse, rapidly brought to a healthful charity that welcomes the humblest, her own account, and conducts her growth. As the real founder of the Barney name be mentioned. Nor is this confined to the higher and yet haughty aloofness that holds private financial affairs wholly distinct sect in America, she and her daughter levels of society, for the Barneys are off the proudest at arms length-for from the others. Laura have always been the acknowlthe best-known people in social Wash- all this and these, there is none in the About ten years ago the family re-ledged heads and leaders, especially in ington, and that is a unique distinction whole country to compare with Mrs. moved their residence to Washington. Washington, where for some years it unappreciated by those who are con- Albert Clifford Barney, artist, author, Mr. Barney's death occurred a few was quite the proper thing, from a sodemned to a life outside the National musician, religious enthusiast, sculptor, years after. Mrs. Barney who, with cial standpoint. to be interested in this capital. To be known in Washington poetess, architect, playwright, actress, her daughters, had even then become latest product of Oriental abstraction. at all one must be well known every- dancer, business woman, and philana prominent member of society as well Plunging at the same time into the where else, and to be well known there thropist. as a leader in artistic and charitable work of practical charity, Mrs. Barney one must have a National reputation. No wonder a woman as versatile as circles, then went abroad for several founded the Neighborhood House, an Members of the Cabinet, Senators and that is talked about! years, roaming hither and yon over the institution that has been productive of those of corresponding grade are lan-Mrs. Barney is a native of Cincinnati. countries of the globe, now studying a world of good to the needy and unguidly recognized by the native Wash- Her father was the founder and art in Paris or Italy, now exploring fortunate of Washington. Her interest ingtonian, but a Member of the House wealthy owner of the famous Pike's unknown Asia. in this did not consist merely in asking would hardly be put in the census. Theatre. Although a belle in the lead- So widely had her talent as an artist the amount of money needed and reach-Washington folks are used to big ones ing society coterie of her youthful days, expanded that Mrs. Barney, at this ing for checkbook. Despite a score of in every line. she nevertheless found time to write time, won the distinction of having other active interests that would have So, when, as is admitted by those and stage, for charity's sake, many a several of her paintings hung "upon engrossed the time of half a dozen less who know their Washington, the Bar- well-written play. She was author the line" in the Paris Salon for a energetic women, she gave the closest neys stand at the head of the list of stage manager, and actress in these number of years. personal supervision to the work, and notables, it behooves those who would early excursions of her genius, and, her It was on this extended visit, and even after it had been fairly and suc-

house keeper will confide, as a special

of those with fame and fortune, dispute

Mrs. Barney in a Spanish Costume.

odds that the grocery man will attempt father discerning her talent, sent her while the Barneys were in Asia, that hibited in the last ten years?" puts in to modify her views by telling her what abroad to cultivate it. On the way she they became acquainted with the cult a literary woman who boasts that she the man who brought the bread said discovered another talent, that of the of Bahaism. Miss Laura Barney, espeabout it yesterday morning. artist, and while abroad studied with cially, became an enthulastic devotee-Now there be these three: Laura, great success under that odd American of which later.

greatest of these is Mrs. Barney. On her return to America, she mar- into knowledge and indifference to the For talent, eccentricity, genius, oddried Mr. Barney, a wealthy financier world's opinion, addressed herself to ness of the shrewdest, deep sympathy years ago, their combined fortunes into the spot-light of notoriety. The Yes, silence has departed thence. For with human kind in all its phases, espe-

Europe. She also did some creditable work in sculpture at times of leisure or in time filched from other work.

As a side line-one of a dozen-this remarkable woman also turned her taltheatrical efforts, all the product of her ent for color combination to use in the pen. They were all successful from a line of invention, discovering, after financial as well as a literary point of much experimenting, a novel method of blending in the dyeing of cloth. The rights to this invention she made over to the women and children of Neighborhood House, one of her favorite charities, which had, under her supervision, grown large enough to occupy two spacious houses she had bought for that purpose; here a large number of persons to-day render themselves selfsupporting by following her methods of dyeing.

> These multiple interests, however, as well as the conduct of her vast estate, were all subordinate to the building of the "Studio House," as she calls it, " commenced about seven years ago. Through this she first became widely known as an eccentric. When abroad she had collected everything artistic and odd which met her eye until she had enough to stock a dozen curio shops.

Reversing the ordinary custom of building a house and then furnishing it in accordance with the general artistic tone and design, she reversed processes, bought her curios, bric-abrac, and antiques from Dublin to Peking, and then set out to build a house around them. The result was the "Studio House." It is located on Sheridan Circle, the most fashionable district in newer Washington, handsome but unassuming, and in its exterior offers no hint of the eccentricities within. 'Fearing that no architect could embody in wood and stone the ideas she had wrought out, she became her own architect; further, after designing the structure, she became her own contractor, and personally saw to the selection of every bit of material that went into it. There is not a door knob, a paneling, or a unique bit of wood or metal designing that she did not work out herself, often going to the shops and standing over the machinist, instructing him in every particular of his work. In decorating the walls which were to serve as a background for the wealth of rich tapestries and hangings she had procured abroad, she donned the painter's blouse and, getting in among them, mixed every dab of paint that went in. (Continued on Page 8.)

Mrs. Barney in One of Her Own Plays, ----

The New Hork Times Published: October 23, 1910 Copyright © The New York Times

On the return Mrs. Barney, ripened

(Continued from Page 1.)

combining the colors with as much care | house. as though she were painting a difficult portrait.

of it. The rooms, passages, and halls is not specified, but left to bother the all been fulfilled. were built solely with an eye to setting off the curios, hence they are of a nature to bewilder the ordinary mortal.

The flooring for the ground and secstaircases, are made of ordinary house brick-why brick instead of wood does "studio" to distinguish it from other rooms (although that is the name realization of her ideals. Here, while given the entire building.)

This room, where Mrs. Barney does her painting, is filled with the most ing one's self with beautiful and costly curious of her antique finds; it also overflows with innumerable fat images of Buddha, who, in the Bahai belief, thus live in a loftier, nobler, more ideal has some considerable standing as a deity. There is an ancient Spanish arch with the supporting pillars, which viands she had prepared for them. while old enough to be interesting, looks most ludicrously out of place thus cribbed in by a modern house.

In the main hall a handsome marble altar, taken from some old Italian church, forms the mantel; there are set out." he said. "but there was a lot columns of jade from the Orient, couches from Pompeii, vases gathered from all over the earth—in short, a wil- she was giving us about the junk she'd derness of things that used-to-be, but dug up somewhere and `stacked up which have outlived their usefulness by several centuries and now serve to think a lot of it. Maybe she likes make art dealers rich. There is a world that sort of thing, but, to tell the true of treasure in the way of tapestries, I'd rather been back in my cottage costly marbles, and priceless curiosand there is not a bed in the house!

Following the manner of living adopted by the Greeks in the golden age of Pericles, the Barney family takes its repose upon wooden couches head and front of the Bahais in Amermade, of course, under Mrs. Barney's ica. The cult-for its devotees do not eye for that purpose.

whole whimsical building is that, al- Bab-and calling himself the Voicethough Mrs. Barney is essentially who proclaimed himself as a modern feminine in her tastes, she would not John the Baptist, the forerunner of one permit a single closet to be built in greater to come. the "Studio."

such a conglomeration of conditions, country proclaimed himself as the Exancient, mediaeval, and modern, the pected One, and coming forward in Barneys, when in this country, make this role began to preach a new rethe "Studio" their home, and appear ligion. He taught that Abraham, Moses,

Commissioners of some future day.

she discoursed to them on the beauties of the ideal life, the charm of surroundcurios and trappings, and urged them one and all to go and do likewise, and atmosphere, the workmen addressed themselves sedulously to the rare

The result of this attempt to uplift the humble artisan may be gathered from the impression of one of the stone masons:

"It was a great feed the old lady of foolish food I was afraid to tackla I couldn't get my hooks into the talk around the house, but she seemed to with the kids a-tumbling over me and Lizzle wrestling with the frying beefsteak for dinner."

Mrs. Barney, as mentioned, is the call it a religion-was started about The most startling thing about the fifty years ago by a Persian named

Later on, when Bab had been gath-Despite the difficulties of life under ered to his fathers, a nobleman of that to extract as much satisfaction out of [Christ, Mahomet, and himself were all order, and the mode of living as pre-1a play woven around life in that an-1 Inheriting from her father the dra-1 itself, aside from its literary contents, it as the new millionaire in his modern earthly manifestations of God. His scribed, blameless. However, polygamy cient city, and the "Man in the Moon," matic instinct. Mrs. Barney is fond of was designed by the author, and will a pantomime, filled, it is said, with in- acting, especially in rôles that call for be a most artistic production, the bindname was Baha Ullah. He sent letters is taught. Mrs. Barney has, by her will, be- to the Pope and all the crowned heads Under Mrs. Barney's nourishing hand teresting and fantastic whimsicalities. rich costuming. She has numberless ing and border being handsomely ornaqueathed the whole of this aggrega- of Europe demanding obeisance and be- the sect was planted in America, and It has been much praised by the critics rich costumes, designed from the dress mented with symbolic Persian designs Thus from cellar to garret she con- tion of the ages, together with the lief in him, and threatening all manner has thriven, especially in Washington. - although this probably lent no value of ancient and modern nations, and in and each page being illuminated in these she loves to array herself and original Oriental coloring. It will be structed the house, her personality house that holds it, to the city of of disasters to such as did not obey. It now embraces several hundred in to it in the author's eyes. standing out in every form and shade Washington; the use it is to be put to These disasters, the Bahais claim, have number in that city, some of them Several years ago she gave an exhi- pose for the pleasure of her friends. handsomely illustrated with engravings persons of prominence in affairs. They bition of more than a score of her One, a costume of an Egyptian Prin- from original photographs. Those rep-Baha Ullah, becoming involved in the have a place of worship on fashionable paintings at the Corcoran Art Gallery cess, is especially gorgeous. resenting the heroine are from original. The opening of "Studio House" was difficulties that beset all founders of Connecticut Avenue, leased for them by in Washington, an exhibition that was True daughters of their mother are photographs of Miss Barney herself, celebrated in a manner characteristic religions, was killed, and his son, Ab- Mrs. Barney, and here they hold their highly successful; but there now re- Laura and Natalie Barney. It is the who posed in costume for them in the of its eccentric builder. Though oc-dul Baha, succeeded to his mantle. He meetings each Friday evening. They mains no picture of hers to the public former who is the most enthusiastic of private studio of an amateur friend in ond stories, as well as the connecting cupying a position in the front rank fled from Persia to escape persecution, are enthusiastic propagandists and ex- view but a portrait in the same gal- the family as a Bahaist. Several years Washington for the purpose of these of Washington society, Mrs. Barney and is now living at Acre in Syria, sur- pect shortly to cover the earth with lery, which has often been mistaken ago she went to Acre and remained in illustrations. for a portrait of herself, but is, in fact, the household of Abdul Baha, the Mani- Miss Natalie Barney, while not as passed by her friends of the purple and rounded by his devotees. He is be- their New Dispensation. not appear. On the second floor is a invited to a combination of reception lieved by his followers to be like his Mrs. Barney's literary work is almost one painted by her of a friend, the only lestation. for more than two years, marked in her personality as her mother large room, specifically called the and banquet only the workmen who father, the Manifestation. The ethics entirely in the form of the drama. Her clew to whose identity is the single sounding the deepest depths and scal- and sister, still has all the original. had taken active part in building this of the religion are said to be of a high best-known plays are "About Thebes," name "Bertha." ing the loftiest heights of the divine characteristics of the family, being at one's teaching. She returned more en- one with them in all their cults of art thusiastically devout than ever, and and religion. Altogether, it is a unique announced her intention of devoting family; one standing out in bold relief the remainder of her life to spreading even in a city like Washington, which the gospel of Abdul Baha. is filled with all that is out of the Under the inspiration of her religious commonplace.

THE AMAZING AND VERSATILE BARNEYS OF WASHINGTON

The New Hork Times

Published: October 23, 1910 Copyright © The New York Times

belief, Miss Barney has written and The whole family has been recently will publish within the month a drama brought again into the line-light of founded upon the cult of Bahaism. The publicity through a nude statue which scene is laid in Persia, the first being was executed some years ago by Miss in a rose garden of Teheran. The hero- Laura Barney in Paris. This was reine, "Quarratu'l-'Ain's," is a believer cently sent to Washington from that in Bahaism, and, owing to the fanatical city, where all the family are now hatred of the Mohammedans for her temporarily resident, with instructions creed, she loses her life in martyrdom. to be placed in the front yard of the It is a bold literary attempt, this of I" Studio" home. The statue was made setting forth in drama the inception of the sport of godless small boys, and the a new religion, but Miss Barney is said Chief of the Washington police ordered to have handled the subject with the it draped with a sheet. talent and genius necessary to make it Rumor, which had birth heaven a success.

also studied dramatic art under the best who had posed for it at her sister's teachers of the Théâtre Français, in studio in Paris. This, reaching the ears Paris, where she is at present residing. of the Barneys in Paris, evoked a storm She is a noted linguist, mastering, of angry protests and demiais from all among others, the difficult Persian members of the family, who, in dislanguage that she might more readily; patches to the American press, denied understand the teachings of Abdul that Miss Natalie had posed for all or Baha.

author, Catulle Mendes, he was a great was a professional model of Paris. friend and admirer of Miss Barney, It now transpires that the rumor, so and was at the time of his tragic taking cruelly painful to the high-strung famoff engaged in writing a play in which liv, originated through the resemblance this beautiful young Baha poetess was many acquaintances of the Barneys the heroine.

ented in the arts of sculpture and paint- ney. Many of these insist that the ing, but, it is said, will lay aside all likeness is as perfect as art can make these to concentrate her efforts on Laura Barney modeled the bust of her literary work for the good of the Baha- sister and placed it upon the figure ist propaganda. The form of the book of the Parisian model.

knows where, then proclaimed that it She was educated in France, where she was a statue of Miss Nutalie Barney, any part of the work of art, and de-Until the death of the eminent French elared that the original of the statue saw between the face of the statue and Like her mother, Miss Barney is tal- the countenance of Miss Natalie Bar-